England, Is Revised Opinion of Former Professor

Interest little less widespread than that aroused by the arrest in San Francisco five years ago of Har Dayal, lecturer on Hindu philosophy at Stanford University and acknowledged leader in the United States of a Hindu plot to overthrow British rule in India, will attend the news that he has recanted. He says he will preach conciliation with England and home rule for India with the same fervency that formerly marked hostility to Great Britain.

News of his change of heart is contained in a signed letter published in a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor. Following his arrest by United States Immigration inspectors March

BUSINESS GPPORTUNITIES

"No thinking man can remain the same after this great war as he was before it. It is now evident that India, Egypt, Persia and the other weak Asiatic nations cannot resist external invasion without England's help. The Germans are no friends of Asia and the Asiatics. The day of the small states is gone. The war has shown that all countries must really follow the lead of other great powers in such crises. The break-up of the British Empire in Asia and Africa would lead only to a change of masters for the people of those countries.

Members of the Colak, Suit and Skirt WILLE oil stocks are questionable in Manufacturers' Protective Association Manufacturers' Protective Association have been advised to pursue such a policy in a special letter sent out by Louis Wiard, general manager of the association.

Louis Ward, general manager of the association.

"Technically our members need not pay the tax to furriers if they were not billed with it at the time the purchase was made," says the letter. "If the furrier was under the impression that the tax would not apply to fur collars, cuffs and trimmings, and neglected to bill his customers with the tax, he is at fault. Morally, however, we felt that the garment manufacturer is under an obligation to pay the tax now. The garment manufacturer took advantage of the technicality and refused to pay the tax the furrier and not the consumer would have to pay it."

The garment manufacturers are endeavoring to obtain a ruling from the government on how costs should be figured on fur trimmed garments which are subject to the tax.
